Finding Data

Advanced Google Search Techniques

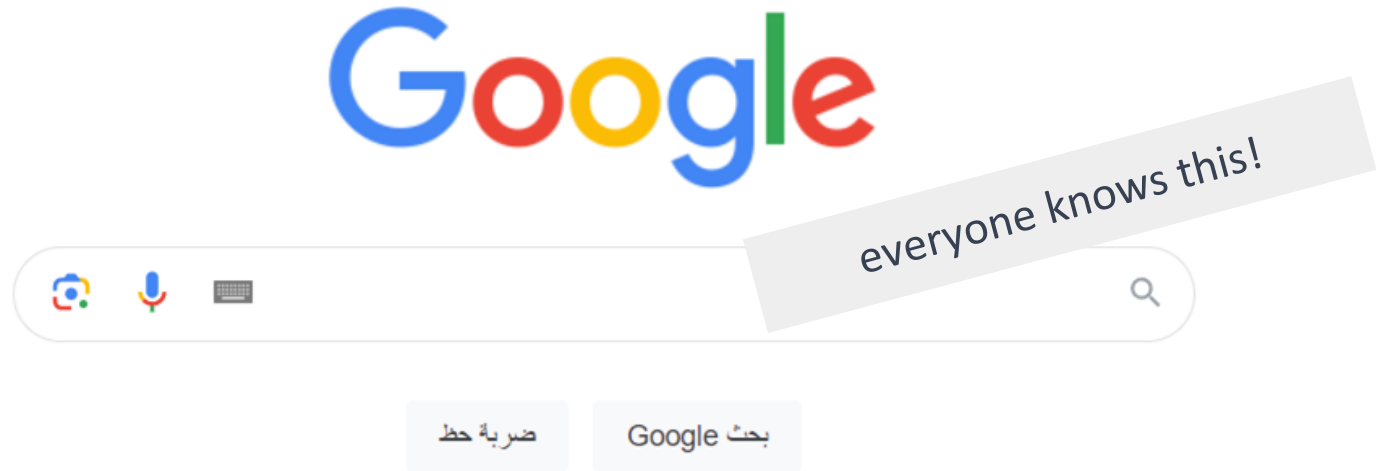

Professor:
Amr Eleraqi

The needle in the hay

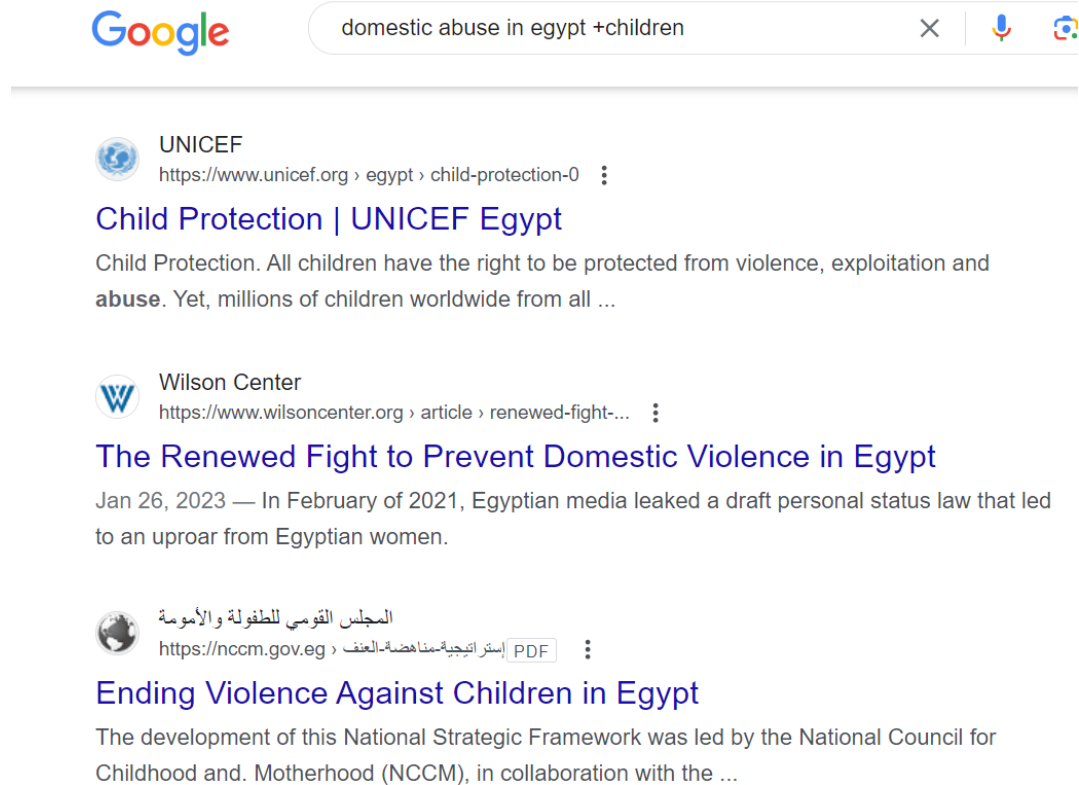

Everytime you use Google to find information regarding a topic of interest, you are bombarded with millions of results. You need to use certain techniques that will filter your results.

Plus (+) Symbol: Adding a plus symbol directly preceding a word requires that the word must be included in every result returned. It ensures that at least one of your keywords appears in the webpage title, body text, metadata description, or URL.

Try:

domestic abuse in egypt +children

The screenshot shows a Google search interface with the query 'domestic abuse in egypt +children' in the search bar. Below the search bar, three search results are displayed. Each result includes a logo, the source name, a URL, a title, and a snippet. Some Points

- Every word matters. All the words that you type in the search box are used by Google.
- The search is case insensitive i.e. Google does not find any difference between CAPITAL and capital.
- Generally, punctuations or special characters like ~!@#$(){}[]\ are ignored.
- Most searches do not require advanced options. Just type in what you want.
- Use the words that you think are most likely to appear on the page.
- Use descriptive words. The accuracy of results depends on the uniqueness of the description.
- Use as fewer words as possible. A combination of many words may limit your search results.

Try compo things:

- Search for all New York Times newspaper articles discussing Egypt's financial situation while mentioning the International Monetary Fund (IMF), dated between January 1st, 2020, and December 31st, 2024, available on the NYT website.
